Father Mestres' Silver Jubilee Today

Rev. Father R. M. Mestres is today celebrating the silver jubilee of his coming to this parish.

When we recall that the first priest of the Catholic Church in this particular section of the new world was the eminent Junipero Serra, and that Father Mestres is one of Serra's successors in this—San Carlos Borromeo—parish, today's celebration occurs as an important event.

At 7 o'clock this morning a mass and general communion was held at the church in Monterey, those taking part marching to the service in a body. This evening there will be a musical and literary program at Knights of Columbus Hall, to which all parishoners and all friends, regardless of creed, of which there are many, are cordially invited.

All Americans Can Serve

Every man, woman and child in this country, who wants to serve the country, can serve it and serve it in a very simple and effective way, says Secretary McAdoo.

That service is to lend your money to the government. Every 25 cents loaned to the government is a help at this time and practically every man, woman and child, by making some trifling sacrifice, some denial of a pleasure, or giving up some indulgence, can render the government that support.

Pine Needles

These are the Carmel boys at present "somewhere in France": Weaver Kitchen, Donald Hale, Lewis and Winsor Josselyn. We're proud of our boys.

Mrs. Alice R. Comins, who has occupied her cottage here for several months, left on Saturday for a two weeks' visit at Santa Barbara, from whence she goes to Cape Neddick, Maine.

After several months in New York and other Eastern cities, Mike Williams is home again. His recent book, "The High Romance," is now on sale.

Registration for the county and state election has been resumed here at the Pine Cone and J. W. Hand offices.

Perry Newberry is a happy fellow these days. His mother is here from Michigan for a month's visit.

Mrs. C. L. Myrick of Oakland, sister of State Senator Edw. J. Tyrrell, registered at Pine Inn last week.

Capt. and Mrs. C. D. O'Sullivan and Miss Ursula Hooper were week-end guests of the Hathaways at Pebble Beach. Capt. O'Sullivan returns to Camp Lewis in a few days.

Jack Neville certainly plays a good game of golf, but his wife can beat him—selling Liberty bonds. At Del Monte last week she sold $10,000 worth in several parcels.

Last year's average daily attendance at Sunset School was 36; at Carmelo 14, and Bay 15. Consolidation would not only save money, but would make for efficiency.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Robinson are at present making their home in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Robinson, before her marriage, was a frequent visitor here; she was then Miss Rita Hartwell Brown.

Last evening at St. Mary's-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove, Rev. G. M. Dorwart and wife were tendered a reception by the parish. The Dorwarts will continue to reside in Carmel until the early Fall.

The last installment of 1917 State and County taxes are due Monday, April 29. If not paid by that time a penalty will be added.

The survey for the Carmel-San Simeon State Highway is under way. Engineer parties are working out of San Simeon, Santa Barbara County.

Writing from New York, Mrs. C. L. Josselyn says: "The letters from the boys are a month apart, while they write every few days. They are well and too busy keeping men fit to fight to have any time of their own."

Mrs. Lee Parker is residing here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Rask, during the absence of her husband in Chicago, called away for important conferences with the Wells, Fargo heads.

Helen Dare, the S. F. Chronicle's clever special writer, has been sojourning here several days. She has been the guest of a number of former newspaper associates.

Carmel was well represented at the Valley dance last Saturday night, a number even making the trip after the moving-picture show.

Rumors are persistent that C. O. Goold and family are shortly to re-establish their home here.

Fred Dablestein, an Eastern artist who visit Carmel about three years ago, is here again; this time with his sister and her family. They plan to make their home in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O'Connell, who have been visiting in Stockton several weeks, are back in Carmel. They re residing with Mr. and M[illegible], L. S. Slevin.

The local public school will close Friday, May 24, for the long summer vacation.

Mrs. L. F. MacDougal expects to reach here from Tucson, Arizona, early next week.

Robert Wolter of Carmel Valley has embarked in the cattle business. Recently he purchased sixty head of cattle, which are being fattened for the market at Gonzales.

Big Audience Enjoys "A Night Off"

Carmel can stand more of such comedy as is afforded by Daly's "A Night Off," so excellently presented at the Manzanita Theatre last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts.

Except for Selby Hanna's farcical wig, the entire show was a success. Even Mr. Kibbler's occasional lapses of memory kept the large audience in good humor.

Carmel's Joseph Jefferson, J. W. Hand, as an exploiter of unproduct tragedies, played his part with an amount of 'pep' of which many a younger man would be quite proud.

J. Selby Hanna, as "Jack Mulberry, in pursuit of fortune," was admirably cast, and played the character like he meant it.

Did you ever see Fanny Rice? Well, in the part of the servant, "Susan," Mrs. Clara B. Leidig had the same affect upon the audience as did the popular Fanny.

Mrs. M. E. Hand, who produced the comedy, has a genius for casting her players exactly where they belong. For instance, as the studious, harassed "Professor," Walter G. Moffat fitted the part like a glove, and Miss E. A. McLean, as the "Professor's wife, with her icy puritanical manner, made the audience sympathize whole heartedly with the husband.

Betty Wand, prettily costumed, played the young married (and suspicious) daughter charmingly, and Tom Reardon was a husband that any nice girl might desire.

Grace Wickham never for a moment forgot that she was the "imp of the household," while Bonnie Hale, as "Prowl," usher at the university, and as the maid "Marie," was pert and pretty.

Comedies, for their success, depend primarily upon presenting their climaxes at the psychological moment. They happened just right the other night.

TO HER ADVANTAGE

By HILDA MORRIS.

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Back in Stanton old Ellis Stevens' bookshop was a famous place, for friendly gatherings and gossip. Its hospitable table full of magazines, its big base-burner with a fire glimmering red through the mica windows, its well-lined displays of paper, pens and other literary appliances made it a popular place for evening gatherings. Young Ellis had been brought up in that bookshop; he loved the very sight and touch of a book. So when ambition drove him to the city with a little capital it was natural that he should start a bookshop of his own. This was a modest place at first, but it grew rapidly, as some shops have a way of doing.

There was one young girl who came into the shop rather often. Ellis had noticed her once or twice—she seemed to be always reading magazines, though she seldom bought more than a pen or an eraser. Ellis Stevens, watching her out a particular morning when there were few other customers, felt a growing conviction that he had seen that girl before somewhere. He stared after her as she left the shop. Where had he known that girl? In Stanton? It was possible.

The girl did not appear that day, however, and Ellis made a discovery. She had forgotten something. On the counter near where she had stood lay a book, a well-thumbed copy of 'Pendennis.' And on its fly-leaf was written, "Rose Maxwell, Stanton, New York."

Rose Maxwell! He remembered now. She was one of the innumerable Maxwell family who lived in the old gray farmhouse out on the Greenville road. He had seen her in school, perhaps, or at the church affairs. She would come back for the book, of course.

But the weeks went by and Rose Maxwell did not return to the shop. It was strange—she had been in the habit of dropping in every day or so before.

A month or so later Ellis made a flying visit to Stanton, and there he learned that Rose Maxwell had not returned home. She was writing short stories, it seemed; one of her productions was in last month's Spectrum. Ellis got her address from friends without any trouble, and hurried back to town. He meant to find Rose Maxwell—of course it was his duty to return that book.

So the following Sunday Ellis Stevens, carrying "Pendennis," called at Rose Maxwell's boarding-house. An incongruous landlady met him at the brown-stone entrance. Miss Maxwell had moved. No, she didn't know her present address. No, she couldn't give him any idea as to where to find her; she had moved some weeks ago. So the following morning this notice appeared in the columns of a daily paper:

"If the young lady who left a copy of 'Pendennis' in Stevens' book store at Eighty-third street will come to claim her property she will learn of something to her advantage."

It was rather a remarkable advertisement, but it brought results. Rose Maxwell came. Ellis was busy with an old gentleman who was fussily purchasing an edition of the English poets, and it was some time before he could speak to Rose.

After an interminable while the old gentleman departed, and Ellis approached the girl. She was still reading, but she looked up with a smile. Ellis thought she was pale and a little thinner. Perhaps she had been ill, after all.

"Was it you who advertised my 'Pendennis?'" she asked. "It was I who left it here, several weeks ago."

"I know it was," he answered. "I thought you would come back after it. I waited and waited before I advertised—because—"

"Because?" she repeated curiously.

"Because I thought I'd find you, Miss Rose Maxwell. You see I knew you—that is I remembered seeing you in Stanton, and I tried all sorts of ways to find you. I looked in the directory. Why, I even went back home to Stanton to find your address—but I found you'd moved."

She was looking at him curiously, her eyes wide.

"But why should you take so much trouble?" she asked. "The book is of no value."

"No, but—well, I wanted to see you. I had to see you again. Don't you see—"

She looked down, her face flushed, and stroked the edge of the counter.

"Not exactly," she said.

"Why I—I—You little Rose Maxwell, I love you! Don't you see? I had to see you again and tell you so, whether you could care or not. I loved you from the first minute you set foot in my shop!"

She looked up, starry-eyed.

"That's why you advertised 'something to my advantage?'" she asked.

"Yes—that was conceited of me. I didn't mean to be conceited. But if you could care a little, Rose, I could make you so happy!"

"You dear old goose!" she exclaimed. "I've cared all the time. Haven't you ever guessed that I left that book here on purpose to make you remember me? I meant to come back for it, only I was ill, and so—But I've waited and waited and I thought you were never going to advertise! I guess it is 'something to my advantage!'"

WEEKLY GREETING

We thank Thee, our Father in heaven, that the Stars and Stripes float side by side with the flags of France and Great Britain; and we most earnestly pray that these precious emblems of human rights may lead to a speedy culmination of the terrible war, that civilization may be the right of way.
—Rev. Henry M. Couden, in the House of Representatives.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

California's junior Senator, Hiram W. Johnson, is beginning to hit the high places. He has just been made a member of the important Military Affairs committee of the Senate of the United States.

After-the-war probable labor conditions and political control are intelligently set forth in an editorial entitled "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," in Collier's of April 20.

Referring to Martin's candidacy for re-election to the Legislature, the Pacific Grove Review says: "There are some questions at issue upon which candidates must come out squarely and define their stand."

Martin says the law will not permit him to pledge himself on the federal prohibition amendment. All right, Mr. Martin; but can't you let the people know what you think about it.

It is to be hoped that our city trustees will soon adopt a general street improvement plan. Property owners on and user of Ocean Avenue are growing impatient.

Liberty Bonds Are Not "Legal Tender," Says Mr. James

Original Statement

As the result of Edgar E. James' splendid address, our people here probably know more about bonds, their value and negotiable character, than they heretofore had any notion of. "These bonds," said he, "are a medium of exchange; you are not expected to put them away and just draw interest. Put them into circulation. If you need the money their purchase represents, sell them, pay a bill with them. They have the same legal tender value as a government 'greenback.'" In conclusion, Mr. James said: "If you can't buy a Liberty Bond, miss a meal, and buy a 25-cent Thrift Stamp."

Correction

Based upon the foregoing, the Monterey American last Saturday published an editorial. Mr. James avers that he was misquoted in the Pine Cone.

To set the matter straight, it should be said that Liberty Bonds are not "legal tender."

The Treasury Department desires to discourage the use of Liberty Bonds to make purchases and to pay debts, except in cases of necessity.

Such transactions during the war, when new loans will have to be made right along, would tend to depreciate the market value of the bonds and hinder the sale of new ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin H. Luther are up from Pasadena for a week. There are no more enthusiastic visitors than the Lurhers. They will spend the week-end at Watsonville, as the guest of Godfrey Fletcher.

A letter from a recent groom, written from Signal Hill, Esquimalt, B. C., who is in the cadet officers' training school, and who will leave for France shortly, tell of what Canada has given in men. No civilian clothes are seen; men everywhere in uniform; most of the older ones wearing a band of mourning on their sleeves, while women are wheeling their invalids into the sunshine.

Mrs. Hamilton W. Mabie and her daughter Helen are returning to Summit, N. J., after a month at La Playa. They will be much missed in the Red Cross work. They motored to Palo Alto with Mr. and Mrs. Judson.

Prof. and Mrs. Percival Chubb are motoring to Berkeley with Mr and Mrs. Beardsley, where they will spend a short time before starting for the East.

OFFICIAL FOOD NEWS

Issued by
U. S. Food Administration
for California
RALPH P. MERRITT, Commissioner

At no time during the war has the importance of wheat saving been greater than at this moment.

So serious is the situation, so vital the need for saving wheat and wheat products, that the government is asking every man and woman in America to stop eating, voluntarily, all foods containing wheat flour and wheat products in any form and in no case to eat more than one and one-half pounds a week. This does not apply to invalids or children, but it has been carefully investigated and found that children can substitute potatoes for bread as well as the grown up and thrive by the change.

All restrictions on the use of other foods have been removed. You may eat as much meat, including bacon and cured pork products, as you need. Out of our vast storehouse of supplies we are asked to select anything we wish—except wheat. While our soldiers are dying on the battle field of Europe to protect YOUR home and YOUR family it is very little to ask in return that wheat be eliminated from your menu. Do away with wheat—abolish it from your table and you will be aiding in the defense of your home and country. Every time you eat a piece of white bread you are taking it away from one who needs it worse, from either a starving woman or child or a hungry soldier. Let that thought be in your mind at every meal and see if from now until the next harvest, five months hence, you cannot say that you have touched no wheat or wheat products. Thousands of people in America are now doing this without any injury to their health or comfort. It is merely inconvenient.

WHEATLESS RECIPES

POTATO YEAST BREAD

1 or 2 cakes compressed yeast.
1 cup lukewarm water.
4 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons corn syrup
6½ cups mashed potatoes
7 cups flour (more or less may be needed.)

Mix as follows: Soften the yeast in the liquid and then add (1) salt, (3) syrup, (3) potato, and (4) enough of the flour to make a stiff dough. Mix and knead thoroughly. Let rise 3½ hours, or until double in bulk. Knead or cut down the dough, add the remaining flour, and let rise again until double in bulk (about 1½ hours). Shape into loaves. Let rise in pans until double in bulk. Bake 50 minutes to 1 hour.

OATMEAL YEAST BREAD

1 quart water
1 or 2 cakes compressed yeast
4 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons molasses
3 cups rolled oats
3 cups flour

Mix as follows: Soften the yeast in one-half cup of the water (lukewarm). Heat the rest to boiling, then stir in the rolled oats. Let it boil up once. Cool, add the salt and syrup and when lukewarm, add the softened yeast. Then add the flour to make a stiff dough. Follow the directions for kneading, rising and baking given for potato bread.

RICE BREAD

1 quart water
1 cup rice
1 or 2 cakes compressed yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
4 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons corn syrup
6 cups flour

Mix as follows: Cook rice until soft, in the one quart of water. Cool until lukewarm, then add (1) the yeast softened in the one-half cup of lukewarm water, (2) the salt, (3) syrup, and (4) the flour. Follow directions for kneading, rising and baking given for the potato bread.

Save Wheat

Wheat saving is America's most vital food problem.

The United States Food Administration, in view of the critical wheat shortage, asks every Californian to observe the following amended rules:

Make every day and every meal a "wheatless" meal. Eat no food of any kind containing wheat or wheat products unless absolutely necessary for health.

Substitute fresh and cured meats of all kinds, potatoes, fresh vegetables, fruits, dairy products and other cereals, such as corn and rice.

The "meatless" and "porkless" days have been suspended. There are now no restrictions on the consumption of any particular foods except wheat. The government urges, however, that no food of any kind be wasted.

Without sufficient wheat to feed our armies and those of the allies, we cannot hope for victory.
